

Georgetown Institute for Women, Peace and Security
Video Production Assistant

The Georgetown Institute for Women, Peace and Security (GIWPS) examines and highlights the roles and experiences of women in peace and security worldwide through cutting edge research, timely global convenings, and strategic partnerships. The Institute is led by Melanne Verveer, who previously served as the inaugural U.S. Ambassador for Global Women's Issues.

One of the most valuable assets of the Institute is the Profiles in Peace: Oral Histories Project, a multimedia-based project that showcases some of the most inspiring women and men who are leading change around the world. These informative, one-on-one interviews are filmed and edited into short, documentary-style videos. The Institute has interviewed more than 50 individuals representing world leaders, activists, and experts from across the globe. Some of the most notable interviewees include former British Foreign Secretary William Hague, President of Liberia Ellen Johnson Sirleaf, Nobel Peace Prize Laureate Muhammad Yunus, President of Kosovo Atifete Jahjaga, and protestors from the frontlines of the Arab Spring. These interviews represent a wealth of experience, insight, historical record, and wisdom that does not exist elsewhere.

The Institute is looking for a video production assistant to help produce engaging videos from existing and new interview footage. The consultant will transcribe interviews, source creative commons b-roll and images, draft storyboards, and liaise with the GIWPS Communications Manager and technical team on the creation of videos.

The video consultant will be hired for June-August 2017 at 10-20 hours per week, depending on project deadlines, and be compensated at $16-20/hour. An ideal candidate will have video/audio editing experience, storytelling skills, and an interest in women, peace and security issues. Georgetown students and people without a Georgetown affiliation are eligible to apply.

To apply, send a cover letter, resume, and portfolio link of some kind to sarah.rutherford@georgetown.edu and specify [Video Consultant] in the subject line.
